

The Victorian budget will help sure up industry's pipeline of works

Consult Australia welcomes the 2020-21 Victorian State Budget

Victoria – Consult Australia welcomes the 2020-21 Victorian State Budget's focus on infrastructure and attracting more investments in the built environment.

The spread of investments – from schools, hospitals, social housing and transport projects – coupled with measures that will attract more investments in the property market, will ensure benefits are spread across industry and the community.

Consult Australia welcomes the focus on new projects, in addition to fast-tracking existing projects. This will ensure Victoria continues to have a long-term pipeline of public works, and will benefit businesses providing the upfront design, advisory and engineering services for these new projects.

From an infrastructure and built environment perspective, the Victorian Government has effectively responded to current market challenges. Many of Consult Australia's members have previously flagged concerns about the outlook for their pipeline of works, and the announcements in the budget will help create more confidence across industry.

Nicola Grayson, Chief Executive of Consult Australia, said:

“We are particularly pleased to see a focus on social infrastructure in the 2020-21 Victorian state budget. We believe this will help respond to a drop in business for many of our members who provide services for private building projects.”

“We welcome the Government's focus on encouraging more property projects through tax and planning changes. This recognises the important role the government can play in creating a strong pipeline of private sector projects by improving investment conditions.”

“The 2020-21 state budget again demonstrates the Victorian Government's commitment to infrastructure and the built environment. The next step will be delivering these substantial investments as effectively as possible, and the expertise of our industry stands ready to assist the government.”
